Jack Hood, NMBL Strategies' Content Manager, has played a critical role in creating important brand awareness that in turn has resulted in new client promotion, attraction, and engagement. He has led the charge for NMBL's Search Engine Optimization efforts that are directly correlated with brand growth. In addition to his management of content for NMBL's website, he is adept at client research for strategic planning, leadership development, and project consultancy. His "can do" spirit makes him an invaluable member of the team.

As Hood prepares for law school, he has taken an active role in NMBL's efforts with court-appointed receiverships by helping with a myriad of responsibilities including assisting with closeout work for JM Marschuetz Construction Co. During his tenure on the project, Jack was responsible for the cataloging, locating, and selling of all vehicles and equipment to assist with payment to secured creditors.

Prior to working at NMBL Strategies, Hood worked at The Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation in Washington DC as a Policy Fellow responsible for tracking and communicating state and federal policy developments pursuant to conservation. He also worked with Congressional offices and conservation organizations to conduct research and program development at the federal, state, and local levels.

Hood earned a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science and English and graduated from Loyola University of Chicago in just two and a half years. At Loyola, he was the Recipient of the Presidential Scholarship. In addition, he was one of the first students at Loyola nominated for a Rhodes Scholarship to reach the semi-finalist stage. In August 2021, Jack will begin law school at Saint Louis University. He is committed to community service and is active with organizations such as the Joshua Chamberlain Society.
